HOW TO GIVE AN AWARD

Which Award is Appropriate?

Once you have decided to give an employee an award, the first thing to determine is "which award is appropriate?" Below you will find a brief description of the reasons why a particular award should or should not be given.

Concentrating on the basis for the award, there are two types:

- A. Performance Awards (Quality Step Increases and Performance Bonuses) - which are based upon an employee's rating of record (which is the performance appraisal required at the end of the rating period); and
- B. Superior Accomplishment Awards (Extra Effort and Spot Monetary Awards, and Nonmonetary Awards, including Time Off) - which are based upon specific, one-time employee contributions.

Once you have selected the most appropriate award, refer to the page number given at the end of the entry for information on how to submit a complete recommendation for that particular award, including any required supporting documentation.

1. Quality Step Increase (QSI)

Appropriate when:

- the employee has received an Outstanding performance rating for the period covered by the recommendation;
- the high quality performance covered a period of at least 6 months and it is likely this performance will continue in the future; and
- the employee has not received a QSI within the past 52 weeks. The ending date of the rating cycle is not important here, just the effective date of the previous QSI.

A QSI is not in the best interests of the employee if it is expected that the employee will be promoted in the near future. In this case, the QSI would be "wiped out" by the promotion and so would be of little use to the employee.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 4 of this exhibit.

2. Performance Bonus

Appropriate when:

- the employee has received a Fully Successful or better performance rating for the period covered by the recommendation and no elements are rated equal to "Does Not Meet";
- the observed performance covered a period of at least 6 months; and
- the employee has not received a Performance Bonus within the past 52 weeks. As with the QSI, the ending date of the rating cycle is not important here, just the effective date of the previous Performance Bonus.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 4 of this exhibit.

3. Individual Extra Effort Award

Appropriate when:

- the employee performed a one-time job, service, or special project in a manner that was substantially beyond expectations. Some examples of this might include overcoming exceptional job difficulties or exceeding records of production without a reduction in quality.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 5 of this exhibit.

4. Team/Group Extra Effort Award

Appropriate when:

- two or more employees were involved in a task or project which meets the criteria for the Individual Extra Effort Award in paragraph 3 of this exhibit.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 5 of this exhibit.

5. Spot Award

Appropriate when:

- the employee performed a specific task which does not warrant recognition at the Extra Effort level. Some examples of this might include: Savings Bond or Combined Federal Campaign coordinators or accomplishments in small special projects of a short duration.

NOTE: An employee may not receive more than $500 total in Spot Awards in any 12-month period. There is no limit on the number of Spot Awards an employee may receive, only on the total dollar amount.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 6 of this exhibit.

6. Time Off Award

Appropriate when:

- the employee performed a one-time job, service, or special project in a manner that was substantially beyond expectations. Some examples of this might include overcoming exceptional job difficulties or exceeding records of production without a reduction in quality.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 6 of this exhibit.

7. Other Nonmonetary Awards

Appropriate when:

- the employee performed a specific task which does not warrant recognition at a higher level. Some examples of this might include Savings Bond or Combined Federal Campaign coordinators or accomplishments in small special projects of a short duration.

Information on how to submit a recommendation is given on page 6 of this exhibit.

Timeliness

For a Performance Award, all recommendations should be made as soon as possible after the end of the performance appraisal period (September 30). For a Superior Accomplishment Award, all recommendations should be submitted immediately after the event. An explanation as to why recommendations are late may be required if the recommendation is tardy.
